By the grace of Jesus Christ I'm still going strong 68 years after taking my first breath. These days the breaths are rather pleasant in the clean desert air of Southern Arizona.

After retiring from work last October, I'm doing what I really should have been doing all those years. Right now I'm repairing the affects of years of monsoon rains and hot, dry weather on painted surfaces and what looked at the time like a robust landscape. I also referee youth and adult soccer games (with yellow and red cards always at the ready), and trying to control my alter-ego, Muffy Snorgle.

My work career was in aerospace (Ford Aerospace, Lockheed Martin, Boeing, Raytheon Missile Systems) where I spent my time designing, building, and caring for test equipment for military weapons used to protect US citizens and kill terrorists. I was also afforded the opportunity to travel to Germany, Taiwan, and Israel thus giving me a taste of other cultures (ours is still the best).

My wife, Lucy, and I have been married for 27 years. We plan to travel to various places in the US, and possibly to places outside the US until the government confiscates our money and limits our choices. We have 4 children (Cathy, Patricia, Stephanie, and John) three of whom have graduated from the University Of Arizona (Go Cats!), and two grandchildren, Ivy and Levi. We also have two dogs (Lula and Gretta)—great companions.

Predicted cause of death: potato chips and vanilla coke.
